THREE YEARS OLD The SHOE STORE

TT'S A LUSTY INFANT.—If the rest of this establishment had grown as rapidly, either Charles Mayer & Co. or the Occidental Hotel would have been crowded off the earth. This birthday "opening" will introduce you to a tripled stock and a doubled selling space. What's better, this growth is the natural result of a principle closely adhered to-that none but shoes of established reputation and undisputed merit should be admitted to the department, and that prices should be marked as low as we could afford at the outset and then remain unchanged Somehow people seemed to like the idea.

EDDIE LYNN, THIRTEEN, ACTED AS ATTORNEY IN JUVENILE COURT.

His Uncle Annoyed Judge Stubbs by His Boisterousness-Other Cases of Youthful Criminals.

A Tartar in the criminal line appeared before Judge Stubbs in juvenile court yesterday afternoon in the person of Eddie Lynn, a thirteen-year-old boy. Lynn tried to plead his case before the judge, and gave the impression that he was well used to the world. He had evidently been coached prior to the trial, as he objected to many things that the judge and prosecutor did. Of the policeman that arrested Army and circulars have been sent to him yours Lynn wanted to know on what specific charge he was arrested. When told that the charge was jumping on trains he desired to know what law covered his case. When the case was aired in court yesterday it was found through the investigations of Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Rogers that young Lynn came from a family of criminals. His father, they said, had served one or two terms in the penitentiary. and other relatives had been arrested several times for felonies. While the boy was dead and he was unaware of the wherebouts of his father. At that juncture an unt and an uncle of the boy arose and inerceded for him. The uncle became so disterous that it was necessary for Judge ubbs to lecture him. It was found that the boy was greatly deficient in learning. t was then suggested by Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Webo that he be sent to the Wirt school at Plymouth, where he could obin an education. The boy stood erect efore the judge when this was said and eclared he would comply with the suggesion if his relatives approved of it; if they not he said he would not go. When he boy made this startling assertion his again became annoying. Judge finally became so incensed at the man's actions that he censured him severely. The judge's words irritated the man ard when he decided to send the boy to the Plymouth school the uncle became offensive and said he would appeal the case to another court. He put his hat on and left the courtroom in a rage. The judge refused to allow the boy to go home with the couple, but sent him to the matron's office until he can be sent to Plymouth.

INTERNAL HEMORRHAGES DEVELOP AND ENDANGER LIFE.

No Motive Is Known, Unless Revenge, as No Attempt Was Made to Rob.

James A. Breeding, proprietor of four barber shops, was shot and probably fatally wounded last night at Chester avenue and Washington street while on his way home. The shooting occurred at 9:15 o'clock by a man Breeding says he does not know. Breeding was shot in the back between the spinal column and the right shoulder. The bullet lodged in the right lung.

The cause of the shooting is shrouded in mystery. Breeding says that the men did not try to rob him. He said it was so dark he could not distinguish the features of the two men he met at Chester avenue and Washington street when he got off the car, but he is sure one of the two fired the shot. He said he got off the car and started north to his home, 197 Chester avenue, and passed the two men. He walked between them and said "Good evening." Neither answered and he continued walk- Indianapolis inspecting the local water nor look around. He had hardly taken anturned and saw the men run into the middle of the street and disappear in the dark-

Breeding kept on to the home of Mr. Montague, 16 Chester avenue, where he asked for assistance.

ANDERSON IS PREPARING The report of the revolver aroused many people in the neighborhood and they ran out. Breeding was found at the front gate of Montague's home. He was losing much blood and had grown weak. He was assisted into the Montague home, and Dr. Williams, who lives near, attended him. Mr. Breeding was later taken to his home and Dr. E. F. Hodges called. A number of policemen and detectives under Captain Hyland were sent to the place. Breeding said he was not certain that he could give a description of the men who shot him, as the corner where it occurred was dark. He said the men did not try to rob him, as they did not ask him to hold up his hands until after he had passed, and then after they shot they ran across Washington street. He said A comrade of Major May Post 244, of Anhe was not in the habit of carrying money the public-spirited citizens of that city are from his barber shops home with him at night and he could not assign any reason doing for the entertainment of the State for the men attacking him.

The meager description share of prosperity. Those who come to visit us at the encampment will go away given by Mr. Breeding of the two men corresponds with that of the two in Wysong's grocery. The police learned of trouble that Breeding had had with a hack driver down town some time ago, and on this theory man that did the shooting. Breeding suffered greatly from his wound

The bullet lodged in the right lung and the wound indicated an internal hemorrhage. The opening where the bullet entered was large and it was evidently a bullet of more than .38 caliber that was fired. Breeding is well known on account of the number of barber shops that he operates. They are at 118 North Illinois street, 212 South Illinois street, 505 East Washington street and 414 West Washington street.

DAVID KAHN'S DEATH.

He Was Prominent in the Business

Life of the City. David Kahn, a well-known resident of the city, died yesterday morning at his home, LITTLE LIGHT ON MURDER trouble, after an illness of a month's duration. Mr. Kahn recently underwent an operation at St. Vincent's Hospital and GRAND JURY'S PROGRESS IN DOC was thought to be improving until a few days ago, when his decreasing strength gave the first warning of the possibility of his death. Mr. Kahn was born in Bloomington in 1853, but moved to Indianapolis a few years later with his parents and was reared in this community. He was a student in Butler College when that institution was located in the building now occupied by the Indianapolis Orphans' Home. The school was then known as the Northwestern Christian University. After graduating from the school Mr. Kahn engaged in mercantile business and soon was at the head of a trunk manufactory in this city which bore his name. After a successful management of the trunk factory for several years he organized the Capitol Paper Company of this city and was active in its management for some time. He retired from this firm several years ago, but retained an interest in it. More recently he was con-nected with the firm of Kahn, Fisher & Co., investment bankers and stock brokers, with offices in the Stevenson building.

During his life in this city Mr. Kahn was prominent both among his own people and among the business men of the city. In Jewish circles he was considered one of the most progressive and public-spirited citizens of the city. In the charities of his church he took an active part and also contributed largely to public charities. Mr. Kahn is survived by a widow, Mrs. Hannah Fisher Kahn, and three children. the oldest of them being Ferdinand Kahn aged nineteen. The funeral will be held from the residence, 1801 North Meridian poration, capitalized at $500,000, filed articles | street, to-morrow afternoon and will be attended by several civic organizations and Jewish societies in which Mr. Kahn held membership. Report that Option Has Expired. The rumor of the purchase of the Odd Fellows' building on the corner of Pennsylvania and Washington streets was revived yesterday by the announcement that an option held by the State Life Insurance Company for the purchase of the building would expire to-day. None of the officers connected with the Odd Fellow order would discuss the possibility of the sale yesterday, and they denied that the State Life Company had an option on the site.

Several months ago the intention of erecting a large office building in the near future was declared by the officers of the State Life Insurance Company. It was said then that nothing definite had been decided on, but some day the State Life

Abe Williams Will Serve Time in the Workhouse.

Abe Williams, of this city, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse by Judge Alford yesterday for "attacking a public conveyance." The costs of the suit for which Williams will have to serve time amount to about $44, which he will have to work out with his workhouse sentence. Williams was punished for throwing a brick through a Big Four passenger train window while it was passing the Washington-street crossing on

The statute under which Williams was tried is seldom recalled, but it so aptly fitted Williams's offense that the indictment was returned on it by the grand jury at the suggestion of the prosecutor. Williams, according to the testimony of the many witnesses at his trial, got on the Big Four train at the Union Station and rode to Washington street with two attorneys from Colfax, Ind., who were returning home. He was quarreling with them over some family troubles of his own and became extremely abusive. He was quieted by the attorneys, but when the train slowed up at Washington street he jumped off and picked up a half brick which he hurled brough the window at the two men.

WILMINGTON (DEL.) OFFICIALS IN-SPECTING THE WATER PLANT.

The Delaware City Will Expend $500,-000 on Water Works System-Stories from the Hotels.

A party of five men representing the city of Wilmington, Del., spent yesterday in interested in the filtration question, and as engineers yesterday L. K. Davis may secure a contract to put in a system of slow filtration in the Delaware city similar to the one which the United States Sand Filtration Company is putting in for the Indianapolis Water Company.

Dr. J. P. Pyle, of the Wilmington commission, said last evening at the English in telling of the object of the visit to In-

"Wilmington is confronted with the necessity of eliminating the pollution of the stream from which the city is at present obtaining its water supply. This commission has heard very flattering and very favorable reports of the system of slow sand filtration as designed by Mr. L. K. Davis, of Indianapolis, and adopted by the water company of this city, and we came on to inspect it. We were very cordially received this morning by Mr. Davis, who showed us over the water works plant of your city, explaining carefully and very intelligently its every detail. As Wilmington is conwith the absolute necessity of adopting some system of water purification, and as the commission seems highly pleased not only with the cordial reception extended by Mr. Davis, but with his system of filtration, which he so intelligently explained, it is altogether probable that Wilmington will adopt some such scheme as is now in process of construction here. "This commission has very carefully studied the system of slow sand filtration which is now in process of construction in Philadelphia under the supervision of Mr. John W. Hill, chief engineer. It has also given careful attention to the results of similar processes as they are being conducted at Albany, N. Y., and at Lawrence, Mass. The system appears satisfactory in all respects and is just what Wilmington

"Indianapolis is a fine city, judging from what we have been able to see of it in one day, and we should be glad to stay here a few days, but it is necessary for us to return at once.' Dr. Pyle said that the improvements Wilmington contemplates in its water works system will involve an expenditure of some $500,000. The visitors were entertained at luncheon at the Columbia Club by Mr. Davis, and during the afternoon they were shown over

LUNG INVESTIGATION SLOW.

Witnesses Know Little on Which an Indictment for Murder Could Be Based.

The investigation of the alleged clews to the detection of the murder of Doc Lung, the Chinese laundryman, killed in Indianpolis by some unknown person last May, will revert to the police department again as the grand jury is meeting with little sucin its investigation. Prosecutor Ruckelshaus said yesterday evening that while much effort on the part of the grand jurors and himself had succeeded in ascertaining that Rufus Cantrell and Samuel Martin knew something about the murder, it had resulted in nothing that could be taken as substantiating a charge of murder to be placed against either. The foreman of the grand jury also said that he believed the jury had done everything possible thus far and he did not believe in remaining idle. Both he and Mr. Ruckleshaus said it would be foolish for the grand jury to continue at the investigation waiting for something to turn up and the best plan would be to bestir themselves in turning something up. The police department, with the detectives and other methods of securing information not possible for grand jury discovery, might be able to work out a case on the clews obtained in the investigation, it was said, and with complete instructions from the prosecutor as to what has already been learned may be enabled to go ahead from where the investigation will be ended by the grand jury.

All day yesterday the jury worked on the alleged evidence which has been published. Several witnesses were examined, among them Dr. Frank Wright, a physician accused of complicity in their crimes by the ghouls, who are now accused of murder by several people and John O. Spahr, Wright's attorney. Dr. Wright did not give the grand jury much information. His talk with Cantrell over the telephone, in which would own a building of its own. Wilmington is especially not, he will be forced to divulge the names of his informants or else explain that they a result of the visit of the commission and also are his clients. If they are named by him they will be subpoenaed and asked what they know of the murder. The only witness who appeared before the grand jury yesterday whose testimony helped to establish the theory that Cantrell knows who killed Doc Lung or was a party to the crime himself was C. M. C. Willis, an Indiana avenue undertaker. Willis told practically the same story to the jury which has been printed. According to Willis. Cantrell met him shortly after the murder and, after accusing several unnamed negroes of killing the Chinese, exhibited several Chinese coins, and said if it was needed to corroborate his assertion that he knew the murderers, he could produce some of Doc Lung's blood.

Patrolman Al Smith, Martin, Sheriff
Metzger and other persons have been named as men who have either heard directly from prisoners associated with them that Cantrell knew something about the murder, and they will be called and their testimony submitted to the grand jury for consideration at its worth.

An opinion expressed yesterday by a man who is conversant with the cases of Dr. Alexander, Dr. Wright and Cantrell, and with all of the known facts of the Doc Lung murder, was that there is little or no truth in all of the suspicions directed against Cantrell and Martin. He said that the revival of interest in the case periodically by letters from the Chinese consul was responsible for the present investigation, and also the nearing of the time for the second trial of Dr. Alexander might have something to do with it. He said that the majority of the witnesses who have talked so freely to the newspaper reporters who have interviewed them, and who have so many blood-curdling stories of Cantrell's connection with the murder to tell, will know little or nothing when they appear before the grand jury, and that their stories are based on hearsay. Most of the men who have talked of a knowledge of the case have done so honestly, the attorney said, but all the stories seem to have sprung from Rufus Cantrell's natural bragadocia, which asserted itself often when he was working at his profession of bodysnatching.
